EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

- JavaScript, HTML 5, and Python are widely popular, in demand languages
- SQL is necessary to work with popular DBs like MongoDB and PostgreSQL
- The popularity of web languages and database languages imply heavy demand in these sectors
- Better to know multiple languages than a single language

- Students seeking positions after graduation need to be prepared with the languages in demand
- Using current job postings and salary information, as well as survey results from programmers, we can determine which languages are the future
- We can extrapolate from the languages what the best sectors to be in are

METHODOLOGY

- Github job posting scraped from API
- Github salary information scraped from web
- Survey results from Stack Overflow
  - Popular website for programmers
  - Representative subset of full survey results

RESULTS

PROGRAMMING LANGUAGE TRENDS – FINDINGS & IMPLICATIONS

Findings

- JavaScript, HTML 5 & Python continue to be popular
- SQL decreases in popularity, but remains high
- Bash/Shell/PowerShell drops

Implications

- Greater demand for JavaScript, HTML 5, and Python programmers
- Bash/Shell/PowerShell decreases in use
- SQL potentially saturated market – remains useful language

DATABASE TRENDS – FINDINGS & IMPLICATIONS

Findings

- MySQL decrease in popularity
- PostgreSQL increase in popularity
- MongoDB increase in popularity

Implications

- MySQL demand is likely lower
- PostgreSQL and MongoDB likely to be future in-demand languages

DISCUSSION

- Python, HTML 5, and JavaScript are perennially popular, widely used languages with broad support
- Niche languages, like Swift, are not present in large numbers
- While increasing in popularity among programmers, MongoDB has relatively few job openings

OVERALL FINDINGS & IMPLICATIONS

Findings

- JavaScript, HTML 5, and Python most popular language and in demand
- SQL popularity is robust
  - DBs like MongoDB and PostgreSQL jump in popularity
- Web and DB languages most popular

Implications

- JavaScript, HTML 5, and Python remain best languages to learn
- SQL and DBs are increasing in use and popularity
- Web programming and DB programming have strong future

- It is best to learn multiple languages in order to secure a position
- Python and JavaScript are highly sought after - #2 and #5 in Github job postings
- SQL is important in dealing with multiple databases - MongoDB and PostgreSQL especially
- Web programming and Database programming are the sectors seeing increases
